17 Must-See Gallery Shows During Frieze Week New York

By Rachel Corbett, Scott Indrisek | April 29, 2016

You've spun through Frieze, dipped down to NADA, and exhausted New York's current crop of institutional shows (including Nicole Eisenman at the New Museum and Cao Fei at MoMA PS1). If there's still time left in the day, here are 17 gallery shows that are well worth a visit this week.

N. Dash at Casey Kaplan, May 3 through June 18 (121 West 27th Street)

For her debut with the gallery, the artist presents silkscreen works derived from the shape of pieces of fabric that she manipulates and worries through the course of a typical day, with the resulting "dirty wads of hugging threads" generating largely chance-based imagery.
